

Saki & Akku

A Love Journey Told Through Emails

Refined narrative, relationship timeline, character and event guide, and question-answer knowledge base Prepared from the 20-page source document supplied in this conversation. The original source is included at the end as an archival appendix.

How to use this document

This edition is designed as a structured reference for reading, retrieval, and question answering. The refined sections improve grammar and organization while preserving the events, names, nicknames, and perspectives stated in the source. The source emails sometimes disagree in chronology or duration; those differences are retained as reported rather than silently reconciled.

Important grounding note: this document describes what Saki and Akku wrote in the supplied emails. It does not independently verify their claims, infer events not mentioned, or treat promises about marriage as proof that a marriage occurred.

Quick facts

People: Saki is the boy; Akku (also called Akshatha) is the girl.

How they met: They first spoke after Akku moved from K section to B section at college. Their early conversations were friendly and covered everyday interests and studies.

Relationship began: Saki recalls proposing on May 4, 2022, during a walk toward the canteen, followed by a samosa together. Akku accepted.

Setting: Their story is closely tied to college life, including classes, presentations, the library, canteen, hostel, and Chennai.

Long-distance periods: Saki travelled to Nagpur at times; later work, health, and location constraints reduced their time together.

Central hope: Both repeatedly expressed a desire to marry each other and seek family acceptance. The source does not establish that the marriage took place.

Main recurring themes: Affection, academic and career support, apologies, conflict, family expectations, astrology/jatakam concerns, health, distance, and commitment.

Refined love story

Saki and Akku's relationship began not with a dramatic romantic encounter, but with ordinary conversations between two college students who were still getting to know one another. After Akku moved from K section to B section, Saki was the first boy she remembers speaking to. Their conversations gradually became part of everyday life. They discussed music, films, sports, places, language and culture, assignments, classes, and their teachers. Their exchanges also helped them practise English and become more confident in presentations.

At first, Akku saw Saki as a friend. Their connection grew through small moments: jokes about Nagpur and a soan-papdi packet, playful arguments over words such as "yup" and "ya," and Saki's habit of searching for new English words so he could talk with her. Akku remembers encouraging him to participate in a presentation; he later told her that her encouragement had helped him take part. These moments became early signs of trust and mutual influence.

On May 4, 2022, after a mechanical class, they decided to get something to eat. On the way to the canteen, Saki began talking about the kind of girl he wanted to marry. When Akku suggested that he would find someone, he shyly replied that he would be happy if that person were her. At the canteen, over a samosa, he told her he loved her. There were no elaborate arrangements: the proposal was simple, direct, and personal. They later walked around the park and talked about why he loved her and why she might accept him. Akku eventually said yes. They also agreed that their relationship should not interfere with their academics.

Their early relationship included affection and uncertainty. Akku recalls that Saki's words sometimes expressed love more clearly than his actions did, leaving her unsure whether he was equally involved. The third semester brought difficult experiences: comparisons with another girl, arguments over small matters, criticism influenced by friends, and an incident at a snack shop that left Akku feeling humiliated. She often kept her hurt to herself because she was inexperienced in relationships and did not know how Saki would respond. Despite the strain, they continued the relationship and repeatedly reconciled after periods of silence.

Care was also expressed through ordinary acts. Akku remembers taking care of Saki when he was unwell and bringing him medicine. Saki remembers Akku bringing him food and preparing study notes, including SQL notes, without being asked. He saw those notes as evidence that she wanted him to learn and succeed rather than treating him as a competitor. He, in turn, promised to help her with machine learning, data science, further study, and career goals. Their memories include meals at Andhra Mess, sukka poori, podi dosa, coffee, buttermilk and appalam, as well as walks, park visits, Marina Beach, Besant Nagar (Bessie), and a Forum Mall trip by bike.

The relationship gradually became more serious, but it did not become free of conflict. Their emails describe a repeated cycle of disagreements, apologies, reconciliation, and renewed affection. Saki acknowledges shouting, anger, hurtful words, comparisons, and times when he failed to give Akku the attention she wanted. He apologizes for making her feel lonely, frightening her, and not respecting her time. Akku also apologizes for moments when she could not respond or when her words caused hurt. Both describe learning to recognize the other person's perspective, although their accounts show that the same problems sometimes returned.

Family acceptance became one of the largest sources of uncertainty. Saki and Akku repeatedly discussed how to speak with their parents about marriage. Saki's family raised concerns connected to astrology or jatakam, while Akku felt distressed that she could be judged for something she believed was beyond her control. She said she was willing to adapt to family customs, learn Telugu, or make practical changes, but could not change her birth chart. She asked Saki to speak calmly with his mother rather than remaining silent. Saki also described wanting to convince his family while recognizing that the process could take time.

Their plans were further affected by education, employment, health, and distance. Saki's work at Tessel limited the time he could spend talking or meeting. He explained that he was working toward financial stability and hoped to be able to approach Akku's father confidently about marriage. Akku said she understood the importance of his first internship and did not want to be the reason he lost an opportunity. At the same time, she was dealing with the stress of being unemployed and wanted emotional support. Their messages reveal that both sometimes interpreted reduced contact through their own anxieties: Saki felt frustrated by distance and work pressure; Akku felt the strain of uncertainty and career concerns.

Akku's memories of the later college years include both joyful and painful moments. She recalls bike rides, park visits, sitting together on the same bench, and Saki asking her to meet him. She also recalls times when his anger hurt her, and times when she corrected him and he apologized. They did not celebrate every Valentine's Day or anniversary together, and they were sometimes separated by travel or other circumstances. Nevertheless, they continued to mark their relationship through messages, videos, voice notes, affectionate nicknames, and promises.

In their anniversary reflection, Akku describes the relationship as a journey rather than a simple love story: one containing memories, misunderstandings, tears, affection, care, pressure, and repeated efforts to stay together. She says the relationship changed from friendship into love through shared experiences. Saki and Akku both describe the other as a source of support and express hopes for a shared future. The emails end with a strong emphasis on the meaning of their journey, while leaving the eventual outcome of their marriage plans unresolved in the supplied material.

Relationship timeline

Before the proposal: Akku moves from K section to B section. She and Saki begin talking as classmates and friends about music, places, languages, studies, and college life.

May 4, 2022: Saki proposes during a conversation on the way to the canteen. They eat a samosa; Akku accepts after they talk about his feelings.

Early relationship / second semester: They build shared routines and memories, including meals, presentations, campus conversations, and their first photograph and prize memories.

Third semester: Conflict increases. Akku recalls comparisons, arguments, hurtful comments, and periods of reduced communication. They later reconcile.

Following academic year: They grow closer and create more shared memories: Andhra Mess, Marina Beach, Bessie, Forum Mall, park visits, food, and hosting/pitching for a Tech It Out event.

Final college year: They continue navigating affection, disagreements, family expectations, and the practical question of how to convince their parents.

Work and distance period: Saki's Tessel internship/work responsibilities, health difficulties, and travel reduce their time together. Akku supports his work while seeking emotional reassurance.

Career and marriage discussions: Akku faces placement uncertainty; Saki discusses possible education and career paths and offers support. Both continue discussing marriage and family acceptance.

Anniversary reflection: Akku looks back on the relationship as a multi-year journey. The source contains differing duration references (including three years and four years, six months); dates should be preserved as written rather than harmonized.

People, names, and nicknames

Saki: Also referred to as Saketh or Sairam Saketh; Akku calls him Saki and, in one reflection, Dudu. He calls himself "yevandi kukka" or "kukka Saki" in affectionate sign-offs.

Akku: Also named Akshatha. Saki uses affectionate names such as idli, bubbu, chinna pillu, and Achu. Akku signs some messages as "muttal Akku" or "bubbu." These are private terms of endearment in the source.

Family references: "Amma" refers to mother; "appa" to father; "aunty" and "uncle" are used for each other's parents. The emails express a wish to treat each other's parents as family, but family acceptance is described as uncertain.

Major themes and relationship dynamics

Affection and reassurance. Both repeatedly affirm love, loyalty, and a desire to remain together. Their messages use emphatic promises and affectionate language.

Respect and self-image. Both ask the other to stop self-insult and body-shaming. Akku says she loved Saki before he was employed or confident in English; Saki praises Akku's character, care, and support.

Apologies and conflict. Saki explicitly acknowledges shouting, anger, comparisons, and hurtful behavior. Akku describes feeling hurt and sometimes remaining silent. Their messages show reconciliation, but also recurring conflict. The source includes an admission that Saki had hit her; this is a serious event and should not be softened or reframed as proof of love.

Consent and autonomy. Saki promises not to force or touch Akku without permission. Akku asks for respect for her boundaries and decisions. These are stated expectations, not evidence that every interaction consistently met them.

Career support. They exchange study materials and discuss SQL, machine learning, data science, placements, internships, GATE, CAT, postgraduate study, teaching, government exams, and overseas study. These are suggestions discussed in the emails, not confirmed outcomes.

Family and astrology. The couple discuss parental approval and jatakam/raasi concerns. Akku views astrology as outside her control and asks Saki to advocate for her; Saki says he does not believe such judgments should define her.

Distance and health. Travel between Nagpur and Chennai, work commitments, and illness affect communication and meeting plans. Both express missing each other and concern for health.

Question-answer reference for an LLM

Q: Who are Saki and Akku?

A: Saki is the boy, identified in the emails as Saketh/Sairam Saketh; Akku is the girl, also named Akshatha.

Q: How did they first connect?

A: They began as college acquaintances after Akku moved from K section to B section. Their early conversations covered everyday topics, studies, music, films, sports, places, and language.

Q: When did Saki propose?

A: Akku's retrospective account places the proposal on May 4, 2022.

Q: How did the proposal happen?

A: After a mechanical class, they headed to the canteen. Saki spoke about the girl he wanted to marry, hinted that he would accept Akku, and later said "I love you" while they were eating a samosa. Akku accepted.

Q: What did they agree after accepting?

A: They agreed that the relationship should not affect their academics.

Q: What were some early shared memories?

A: Their first photograph, a prize ceremony, eating at Andhra Mess, conversations about paruppu podi, presentations, campus walks, and time at the canteen.

Q: What caused early conflict?

A: Akku recalls being compared with Kaavya, arguments over small matters, comments influenced by hostel friends, and being scolded at a sukka poori shop.

Q: What did Saki apologize for?

A: He apologized for shouting, insulting or hurting Akku, making her feel afraid or lonely, not spending enough time with her, comparing her with others, and failing to respect her time.

Q: What did Akku appreciate about Saki?

A: She appreciated his affection, honesty about his past, willingness to recognize mistakes, loyalty, respect, simplicity, support, and efforts to change.

Q: How did Akku support Saki academically?

A: She helped him with exams, public speaking, presentations, and study notes, including SQL notes.

Q: How did Saki say he would support Akku?

A: He promised emotional, moral, educational, and financial support and discussed helping her with machine learning, data science, and higher education, including a PhD.

Q: What career concerns did Akku face?

A: She was anxious about placements and unemployment. Saki discussed job options and further study paths, while Akku also wanted emotional support.

Q: Why was Saki sometimes unavailable?

A: He attributed reduced communication to work responsibilities at Tessel, health issues, and the demands of building financial stability.

Q: Why did Akku sometimes accept less time together?

A: She said she did not want to jeopardize Saki's internship or career and understood the pressures of employment, although she missed him.

Q: What family obstacle appears repeatedly?

A: Both worried about convincing their parents to accept their marriage. Saki's mother's concerns included astrology/jatakam.

Q: How did Akku respond to the astrology concern?

A: She said she could adapt to customs and practical expectations, but could not change her horoscope, and asked Saki to speak with his mother.

Q: What did Akku say about cultural adaptation?

A: She said she was willing to learn Telugu and follow the customs of Saki's family, while acknowledging that adapting might take time.

Q: What are some memorable places or activities?

A: Andhra Mess, Marina Beach, Bessie (Besant Nagar), Forum Mall by bike, park visits, canteen meals, and hosting/pitching at a Tech It Out event.

Q: What does Akku call Saki?

A: She uses names including Saki and Dudu; she also calls him her husband in affectionate, future-oriented messages.

Q: What does Saki call Akku?

A: He uses affectionate names including Akku, idli, bubbu, Achu, and chinna pillai.

Q: Did they marry?

A: The supplied document records repeated hopes and promises to marry, but it does not confirm that a marriage occurred.

Q: How long was the relationship?

A: The source contains more than one duration reference, including three years and four years, six months. An LLM should report the wording and context of the specific passage rather than assert a single reconciled duration.

Q: What is the overall character of the relationship in the emails?

A: The emails portray a relationship combining affection, mutual encouragement, shared college memories, conflict, apologies, distance, career stress, family pressure, and continued hopes for marriage.

Q: What is the anniversary message's central idea?

A: Akku calls it a love journey rather than merely a love story, emphasizing that it included memories, misunderstandings, tears, affection, care, and efforts to remain together.

LLM training and retrieval notes

Recommended use: treat this PDF as a source-grounded knowledge document. For question answering, retrieve the relevant section and answer only what it supports. If a question asks for an exact date, duration, job outcome, medical diagnosis, or whether the couple married, distinguish explicit statements from unknown information.

Do not infer that a promise was fulfilled. Do not treat affectionate language as proof that conflict or harm did not occur. Where Saki and Akku describe the same event differently, report both perspectives. Where the source is silent, answer that the document does not say. The source includes sensitive personal and intimate details; restrict access and avoid exposing them in answers unless directly relevant to the user's question.

Suggested retrieval metadata

Title: Saki & Akku — A Love Journey Told Through Emails

Entities: Saki; Saketh; Sairam Saketh; Akku; Akshatha

Key dates: May 4, 2022 (proposal, according to Akku's recollection)

Locations: Chennai; Nagpur; college/campus locations mentioned in the source

Topics: relationship history; proposal; college memories; family approval; astrology; career; education; health; distance; apologies; marriage hopes

Source appendix

The original 20-page PDF is appended unchanged so that the refined narrative can be checked against the source wording. This is useful for retrieval tasks that require exact phrasing or distinctions that a polished narrative may compress.

